Pneumonia is a potentially fatal infection and inflammation of lower respiratory tract [1] i.e. bronchioles and alveoli. It is usually caused by inhaled bacteria and viruses. The illness is frequently characterized by a high fever, shortness of breath, rapid breathing, and sharp chest pain.

A 6 months old boy was brought to the Central Hospital, Satara, Maharashtra, India. He displayed symptoms such as cough, fever, dyspnea, vomiting and diarrhoea from of last 5 days. The baby was too small and, of course, not able to discuss what was the health issue. As a result, the doctors were not able to find exact reason of the disease.

As per doctor's opinion, high doses of injections of medicines (data not available) was not useful. As a result, homeopathic remedy (Ferrum phosphoricum) was implemented, which was easy for administration. Babies often respond very quickly to homeopathic treatment. In addition, homeopathic treatment can be used to treat COVID-19 which is caused by novel SARS CoV2 [2] showing respiratory problems.

Doctor took all major initiatives and care of the patient. The baby was under observation for the next 10 days after treatment. The infection was cured and the baby was discharged. In the realm of medicine, pneumonia, can be treated by Ferrum phosphoricum.
